4.2 Présentation du glossaire bilingue anglais-français

No	ANGLAIS	DÉFINITION	FRANÇAIS
1	Political power	The summation of means, influences, and pressures available to a government, institution, group, or individual that are exploited to achieve respective objectives or to change targeted conditions. Political	Puissance politique

		power may be exerted positively, in the form of incentives, or negatively, as in various types of sanctions. Domestic and international relations are influenced and at times dictated by the relative political power among parties. The attainment of political power is often a source of conflict in itself. Differentials in political power can be a crucial factor in determining the outcomes of disputes, but in such situations the underlying causes of the conflict in question are often purposefully ignored. Groups are often unaware of their full power capacity, creating distorted assumptions of the balance of power among contending parties. Shifts in power relationships can occur through a full realisation of political power or structural changes within or among societies.
2	Reconciliation	A process that attempts to transform intense or lingering malevolence among parties previously engaged in a conflict or dispute into feelings of acceptance and even forgiveness of past animosities or detrimental acts. Reconciliation may involve recourse to justice, particularly where one party has suffered egregiously relative to or at the hands of the other party. In such cases, compensation for victims might be offered as an emollient. If proffered sensitively, compensation has tremendous healing capacity for the injured party as well as for the perpetrators of harmful acts. Although reconciliation is far from being standardised	Réconciliation or even fully understood, the process usually involves the oppressors' acknowledgement of their actions; their sincere expression of regret and remorse; and elements of forgiveness on the part of the victims for such acts. Therefore, it involves much more than telling, or a simple realisation, of truthful facts.

3	Security	A subjective state in which an individual or collectivity feels free from threats, anxiety, or danger. Such insecurities have typically been defined in relation to nation-states, for example regarding borders or institutions responsible for governance. Security stands along a continuum and, therefore, cannot be understood in absolute terms. Given relative perceptions, reaching or maintaining security is almost always a contentious matter, subject to shifting perceptions. To ensure security at the national level, governments must trust their ability to deter attacks or to defend against them. Such capacity has centered historically on the uses of military power among nation/states.	Sécurité
4	Social contract	The notion that individuals and nation-states tacitly agree to a set of mutually binding stipulations and obligations. The social contract has long served as a philosophical foundation for understanding modern conceptions of citizenship and constitutionalism, whereby individuals willingly submit some of their personal freedoms to political authority in return for	Contrat social

		the general benefit of all members of a given society. So-called con
5	Strategy	The activity, process, or plan to attain desired objectives or goals as efficiently as possible, usually in the face of or in competition with others who are developing and implementing similar activities. Strategy is essentially the application of means to attain desired ends. Here, means are expressed widely, suggesting available or retrievable political, economic, social, and psychological resources	Stratégie
6	Weapons of mass destruction (WMD)	Any weapon capable of horrific human or material destruction. Weapons of mass destruction may be nuclear, chemical, biological, or radiological. The acronym abc is sometimes used to refer specifically to atomic, biological, and chemical weapons. The term 'weapons of mass destruction' is literally translated from Russian. Since its inception into the English language, it has remained vague, imprecise, and ambiguous.	Armes de destruction massive (ADM)
7	War	A mutually recognised, hostile exchange of actions among two or more parties (such as between or within nation-states) conducted by conventional military forces, paramilitary forces, or guerrillas to achieve respective policy objectives. Warfare assumes a degree of continuity until such objectives are accomplished or a party concedes or is defeated.	Guerre
8	Sanctions	Penalties threatened or imposed by a government, institution, organisation, or	Sanctions

		group on a targeted party for actual or anticipated failure to act in accordance with standards, obligations, or expectations. As countenance or encouragement, forms of sanctions may range from the political to the economic to the cultural. Punitive sanctions similarly have great variety. Economic sanctions include embargoes and prohibition of foreign aid. Political sanctions may target diplomatic links or international organisational participation. Cultural sanctions may limit educational exchanges and involvement in sporting events. Implementation may be unilateral or multilateral, comprehensive or selective, and initiated by official authorities or civil society organisations, although in common usage the term ‘sanctions’ is often used to describe penalties imposed among nation-states. In all cases, sanctions are enacted to coerce the party in question and influence its behaviour.
9	Reconciliation	A process that attempts to transform intense or lingering malevolence among parties previously engaged in a conflict or dispute into feelings of acceptance and even forgiveness of past animosities or detrimental acts. Reconciliation may involve recourse to justice, particularly where one party has suffered egregiously relative to or at the hands of the other party. In such cases, compensation for victims might be offered as an emollient. If proffered sensitively, compensation has tremendous healing	Réconciliation capacity for the injured party as well as for the perpetrators of harmful acts. Although reconciliation is far from being standardised or even fully understood, the process usually involves the oppressors' acknowledgement of their actions; their sincere expression of regret and remorse; and elements of forgiveness on the part of the victims for such acts. Therefore, it involves much more than telling, or a simple realisation, of truthful facts.

10	Peacekeeping	The maintenance of public security, civil services, and cease-fire agreements in war and conflict zones by UN or regional military, police, and civilian forces with the consent of the nation-state on whose territory these forces are deployed.	Maintien de la paix
11	Peace	A political condition that ensures justice and social stability through formal and informal institutions, practices, and norms. Several conditions must be met for peace to be reached and maintained: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • balance of political power among the various groups within a society, region, or, most ambitiously, the world • legitimacy for decision makers and implementers of decisions in the eyes of their respective group, as well as those of external parties, duly supported through transparency and accountability • recognised and valued interdependent relationships among groups fostering long-term cooperation during periods of 	Paix

		agreement, disagreement, normality, and crisis <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • reliable and trusted institutions for resolving conflicts • sense of equality and respect, in sentiment and in practice, within and without groups and in accordance with international standards • mutual understanding of rights, interests, intents, and flexibility despite incompatibilities
12	Nonviolence	A holistic belief in and practice of abstaining from violent acts. Such belief systems may stem from various religions and ethical codes, with the range of understandings varying equally. These may include degrees of rejection of mental harm or physical damage to the environment, the self, or others. In some instances, a conviction in nonviolence rejects the notion of adversaries. Normative nonviolence—religious, ethical, or principled—may be a creed, matter of spirituality, or system of morality. It can also be an article of faith.	Non-violence
13	Negotiation	Communication, usually governed by pre-established procedures, between representatives of parties involved in a conflict or dispute. As a technique in the management and resolution of conflict, negotiation is conducted on various grounds: to identify common interests and develop unilateral or multilateral initiatives in pursuit of objectives, to de-escalate a conflict	Négociation situation, or to formulate mutually satisfactory solutions towards resolution of a given conflict.

14	Mediation	A voluntary, informal, non-binding process undertaken with an external party that fosters the settlement of differences or demands between directly invested parties. Mediators often have a general interest in the resolution of a given conflict or dispute, but theoretically they are able to operate neutrally and objectively. Lacking the authority to coerce or impose judgements, conditions, or resolutions, such facilitators aim to transform the dynamics of the conflict situation by introducing new relevant knowledge or information, especially regarding the negotiation process between the disputants, and by revealing common interests and suggesting possible directions towards settlement. In acute situations, mediation acts as a means of facilitating communication, commonly termed ‘good offices’, through the consent of the vested parties that are unable to formulate mutually satisfactory resolutions on their own.	Médiation
15	Mechanisms of change	The four processes by which non-violent struggles succeed: conversion, accommodation, non-violent coercion, and disintegration. Conversion, the most desirable yet rare mechanism of change, occurs when an opponent accepts the justification of the objectives of those employing non-violent action and in turn	Mécanisme de changement concedes based upon this shift in perspective. Accommodation involves mutual compromise over select objectives between an adversary and non-violent protagonists.

16	Genocide	Acts aiming to significantly reduce or eliminate entirely a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group through murder, physical or mental harm, unfit living conditions, birth prevention, or forcible population transfer. The crime of genocide was fortified and defined by the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide of 9 December 1948 and further elaborated in Statute Article 2(2) of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. Although the specific actions defining genocide are well articulated, murkiness surrounds what constitutes a recognised ‘group’. Genocide excludes groups that individuals join voluntarily; membership must be by birth into a stable, permanent group. Thus, mass killings or violence perpetrated against groups not recognised by the Genocide Convention have sprouted terms such as ‘politicide’, ‘democide’, and ‘gendercide’. Those suspected of the crime of genocide are bound by international law to face trial.	Génocide
17	Disarmament	The near elimination of military arsenals and forces, usually by a nation-state, through bilateral or multilateral agreements or unilaterally. Although complete disarmament is deemed idealistic, the concept is often considered interchangeable with arms	Désarmement

		control, which is viewed as more practical and refers to restraints on specific weapons or forces. More of a process than an event, disarmament theoretically speaking contributes to a reduction in tensions, legitimises the reflexive turn to military force in conflict, and redirects military expenditures and resources towards other endeavours. The first attempts towards international disarmament were discussed at conferences in The Hague in 1899 and 1907, but neither produced positive results. The most significant instances are associated with compulsory disarmament policies proposed for societies after defeat in war.
18	Demilitarisation	The removal of military or paramilitary forces from a determined area or the concession of particular weaponry by one or all parties engaged in conflict. Demilitarisation normally occurs in the aftermath of a debilitating civil war. The intended immediate reduction of threat can be stabilising or volatile, depending on the timing of demilitarisation and its role within a wider post-conflict strategy. More successful efforts are commonly accompanied by endeavours to professionalise armed forces and reallocate military spending in an attempt to bridle the armed forces under legitimate civilian control. The political gains achieved in conflict or through the actual demilitarisation process must appear to outweigh the risks	Démilitarisation associated with demilitarisation. It, therefore, is inherently linked to civil-military relations.

19	Coup d'état	The illegal overthrow and seizure of a government apparatus through threatened or actual violence by individuals of the respective government. Often led by military, political, or governmental figures, successful coups d'état are normally conducted in less than seventy-two hours. Members of the armed forces typically guide the resulting governmental junta (council or bureau) that assumes direct or indirect control of the state apparatus. The new group in control of the government may cede power to democratically elected leaders, but more often its members retain control through some form of military rule.	Coup d'État
20	Conflict prevention	The anticipation of conflict that seeks to redress causal grievances to avoid the escalation of violent forms of conflict engagement or to curtail the re-occurrence of violent exchanges or some combination of these elements. The term ‘conflict prevention’ can be misleading, because theoretically none of the aforementioned aspects aspire to ‘prevent’ conflict as such. Instead, the aim is often to resolve a conflict at hand or more typically to prevent escalation or violent manifestations. Although at times referred to as ‘preventive diplomacy’ and ‘crisis prevention’, such activities usually involve maintaining the status quo due to potential threats associated	Prevention des conflits with crises or the anticipated outcomes from engaging in a dispute. Conflict prevention, however, recognises that in order to avoid the catastrophes associated with strife, particularly violent upheaval, change is usually necessary, for example, through new institutions, revitalised processes, or the sharing of power.

21	Compromise	An outcome to a conflict in which the parties involved concede in order to obtain only a portion of their objectives. Such results often occur when the contending parties lack the strength or ability to achieve a complete victory, seek to avoid escalation because of mutual interdependence, or value a future relationship with one another. Compromises may be internally or externally proposed, with external propositions more likely to be received favourably when the third party is seen as neutral or trusted by both sides.	Compromis
22	Civilian-based defence	A policy designed to accomplish a full range of defensive objectives, including deterrence as well as preparations to defend against internal and external acts of aggression. The term is quite literal, indicating planned defence by citizens (as opposed to military personnel). Various methods of non-violent resistance are employed in place of military or paramilitary operations. Successful non-military civilian defence requires that general populations be provided with appropriate training, equipment, and funding to enact the policy. Such civilian defence has only been	Groupe de defense civile adopted in limited cases and degrees. It works as follows: in the face of an attack, invasion, or military occupation, civilian defenders work to deny their opponent's objectives. Through non-cooperation measures, political defiance, and control of key social and political institutions, they make it difficult or impossible for their home country or territory to be ruled by the aggressor. Civilian-based defence has also been variously referred to as 'civil resistance', 'non-military defence', 'non-violent defence', and 'social defence'.

23	Civil society	A sphere of society distinct and independent from the state system, the means of economic production, and the household. This collective realm, or 'public space', includes networks of institutions through which citizens voluntarily represent themselves in cultural, ideological, and political senses. The term 'civil society' is often employed in the context of mutual rights and responsibilities. From the midnineteenth century onwards, distinctions between civil society and the state became more pronounced, reflecting the view that independent sectors (within civil society) can defend themselves from a state. More recently, the notion of capitalist endeavours being at the heart of civil society has been replaced with a central concept of a sphere in which social activity protects the substance of democracy	Société civile

24	Cease-fire	A bilateral or multilateral halt in all or select offensive military actions among parties engaged in official war, guerrilla warfare, or violent exchanges with one another. Cease-fires sometimes lead to more stable or permanent military or political agreements, but they minimally aim to reduce immediate tensions and extreme losses while providing opportunities for the initiation of other forms of conflict resolution or management efforts.	Cessez-le-feu
25	Capitulation	A conditional surrender or yielding of rights by a party engaged in a conflict. Capitulation is usually in the form of an official document.	Capitulation
26	Appeasement	A policy of granting concessions in response to aggressive or hostile demands with the intent of gaining some greater good or asset. Appeasement is usually portrayed as a willingness to accede to an immoral actor or entity. In extreme cases, practitioners may even be accused of cowardice.	Apaisement
27	Aggression	An unprovoked, offensive act of hostility, attack, or violence on the individual, communal, regional, or governmental level. In the legal sense, aggression refers to military attacks by one nation-state against another or its armed forces. I	Aggression
28	Accompaniment	The physical presence of civilians, sometimes foreign volunteers, with the aim of protecting activists from violent attacks or intimidation and encouraging their continued activities. The use of accompaniment, a method of non-violent struggle, carries with it the possibility that politically motivated	Accompagnement violence perpetrated against activists will result in undesirable consequences, usually in the form of international sanctions, against the sponsors of such violence.

29	Alliance	A coalition of individuals, groups, or nation-states based on formal or informal agreement, open or secret, formed to assist one another to secure identified objectives according to specified and mutually accepted criteria.	Alliance
30	Arbitration	A mechanism for resolving conflicts whereby the disputants identify their grievances and demands, fix a procedural process, and willingly submit the decision of outcomes, which are to be final and binding, to an external entity. The contending parties often select the majority of the members of the third party, which normally takes the form of a tribunal. The third party is usually presented with arguments and evidence from both sides, but the process can vary according to the pre-established procedures. Although similar to adjudication, arbitration is informal, private, economical, and relatively quick.	Arbitrage
